CBDR is a fundamental principle in the context of multilateral environmental agreements

- 1972 Stockholm, 1st UNCED, Declaration on the Human Environment
- 1987 Montreal Protocol
- 1992 Rio, 3rd UNCED
- 1994 UNFCCC
- 1997 Kyoto Protocol
- 2012 Rio+20
It is also founding principle of the UNFCCC and its Kyoto Protocol

Article 4
Developed countries:
Annex I Party:
take the lead in combating climate change and the adverse effects thereof;
Annex II Party:

Annex B of Kyoto Protocol
Reflection of the CBDR in the 2015 Agreement

Why the principle CBDR is so important?

- Reflecting equity which is crucial for international cooperation
- It considers the various factors:
  - General and economic development
  - Historical responsibilities
  - Political aspect
Reflection of the CBDR in the 2015 Agreement

World has been changing in last several decades

- Globalization
- Emerging economies
- GHG Emissions grow continuously
Will the principle CBDR still applicable in the context of addressing climate change?

The COP also decides to launch a process to develop a protocol, another legal instrument or an agreed outcome with legal force under the Convention applicable to all Parties, through a subsidiary body under the Convention hereby established and to be known as the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Durban Platform for Enhanced Action.
Is the basis of the principle of CBDR still valid?

Factors:

- Economy development
- Social development
- Historical and current GHGs emission
Country classifications based on different index:
- Income: High income/ Upper-middle income/ Lower-middle income/ low income;
- Human development: Very high/ high/ middle/ low.

Reflection of the CBDR in the 2015 Agreement

There are specific changes among countries
Is the basis of the principle of CBDR still valid?

- The general division between developed and developing countries still exists
- Differences are emerging among developing countries
How to reflect the CBDR in 2015 agreement?

- CBDR principle is still the key to ensure equity
- Built on the past. Keep the notion of developed and developing countries
- Reflect the changes. Differentiations among developing countries can be reflected through specific contributions by each country.
